About Japan Nuclear Disaster Aid Association (a.k.a. 311 Ukeire Zenkoku)

Many “accept-and-welcome aid activities” began across Japan after the 2011 Tokyo Electric Fukushima Daiichi nuclear power plant accident. In September 2012, we created an expansive network connecting aid groups across Japan, offering information and holding consultation sessions to those who are worried about their children's health. There have been a steady number of people wishing recuperation or relocation, given the continuing nature of the accident and the failure of decontamination to completely remove radioactive contamination from the every day environment. Yet with passing time, various resources such as donations and grants have been drying up, and we feel that people are beginning to think “The effects from the accident are over.”

That is why we think it is important to deliver voices of people from the disaster affected areas all over the nation to learn what types of support are needed now through our network. Not limiting ourselves to offering information, we are putting our effort towards developing the aid which fulfills the needs. In addition, we share experiences of aid providers to deepen what the aid offers on a daily basis.

How “311 Ukeire Zenkoku” was created: In February 2012 when over 100 groups from across Japan gathered at the “National Summit to Protect Lives from Radiation” in Fukushima City. They reached a consensus, “This work must continue,” and began deepening grassroots cooperation.

the Fukushima nuclear accident happened...

I am afraid to let my kids
play outside ...

I worry about everyone's health...

Worried all alone?

We hope to support you when you decide to act to build a future where you can live without worries.

Recuperation

Even as you live in the disaster affected areas, many groups across Japan are waiting to accept and welcome you and your children for "recuperation." This will allow you to have time away from radioactive contamination without interrupting your everyday life. Do you need to refresh your mind and body?

Relocation

You might be thinking: "I want to raise my children far away from worries" until they grow up; or "I want to relocate at the start of a new school year."

But you may be anxious to move to unknown places.

We will introduce you to the community of people who already relocated as well as the local supporters.

Consultation

Local consultation sessions

We hold consultation sessions in the Fukushima Nuclear disaster affected areas as well as the recuperation/relocation destinations. You can speak directly with representatives of aid groups from across Japan.

Consultation session Mtg.

A mailing list version of consultation sessions for both people wanting consultations and aid groups.
